B-3. RRA: Workshop: Real-Time Univariate and Multivariate Data Analysis for Decision-Makers

Room: Douglass

Organizer/Convener: Marjorie Royle, Clay Pots Research (claypots@optonline.net)

Large multid denominational and multivariate datasets such as the Faith Communities Today and the U.S. Congregational Life Surveys provide excellent opportunities to explore complex relationships among variables, controlling for differences by denominational or faith family, congregational size, race/ethnicity and other factors. Such analysis requires skills in multivariate analysis. However, such analyses present challenges both in performing them and in communicating the results to denominational executives and others who are not trained in statistical techniques. Using the UniMult statistical program and the FACT 2010 data, this session will demonstrate a way to involve non-statisticians in helping develop and test hypotheses. Attendees will be encouraged to suggest analyses, which will then be performed. This real-time involvement is an effective tool

B-7. SSSR: Workshop: Teaching Pluralism

Room: Alcott

Convener: Whitney Barth, The Pluralism Project, Harvard University (wlb356@mail.harvard.edu)

Over the past two decades, the Pluralism Project has documented the changing religious landscape of America. We have studied the ways in which these changes, largely stimulated by the "new immigration" of the post-1965 period, have posed new issues for virtually every public institution in the United States, including all of our educational institutions. At the same time, there has also been increasing research in the field of education documenting the effectiveness of case studies in learning, either as a substitute for or an enhancement of the primarily lecture-based courses that are still the usual fare in many colleges and universities. The Pluralism Project has developed a Case Study Initiative to explore how the case method can be creatively applied to teaching and learning in the classroom. Our basic texts are the issues that arise in the contexts of our civil society, public life, and religious communities.

Participants in this workshop will have the opportunity to engage with their peers in discussion of a Pluralism Project case study and brainstorm together ways in which case studies, as a pedagogical tool, might be integrated into their teaching. Information will also be provided about the Pluralism Project's current collection of case studies and online resources. For more information about the Pluralism Project, please visit www.pluralism.org.

"Is Secularism Working?"

Moderator: Michele Dillon, University of New Hampshire

Is secularism working? Assessing the place of religion in modernity continues to vex scholars and political commentators, especially as the promises of modernity and of secularism may seem, at times, to fall short of full realization. In this moderated panel, four panelists, working from within different scholarly disciplines and methodologies, will assess the extent to which secularism is doing what it is in part, or wholly, intended to do within and across diverse societal contexts, and probe its impact on religion and society at large.

Perhaps you have tried setting up a Facebook page for your congregation or other religious community and haven't seen much of a response. Or perhaps you want the community to use social media and don't know where to start. This workshop will explain some of the tools religious communities use and help us think about how people of faith can communicate with each other and others through social media. We will explore the differences between broadcast media and social media, help participants become familiar with different social media tools, discuss best practices for pastoral leaders online, and assist in crafting a digital media strategy for your community. This workshop is appropriate for all levels of familiarity with social media.

Interested in a sabbatical opportunity or post-doctoral fellowship?

The Collegeville Institute invites applications for the 2014/2015 Resident Scholars Program.

The program brings together well-trained, creative, articulate men and women for careful thought in a place of inquiry and prayer. Applicants are encouraged to apply for either a semester or a full academic year. Additionally, applicants whose research addresses the intersection of faith and culture in contemporary society are eligible to apply for one of the following:

- Collegeville Institute Post-doctoral Fellowship
(designed for scholars who have recently earned doctoral degrees)
- Kilian McDonnell Fellowship in Faith and Culture
(designed for accomplished scholars on sabbatical leave)

Scholars awarded a residency enjoy housing on our lakefront campus, integration into a unique learning community, and the time and space necessary for productive research.

Oriented to Christian faith, the Institute also welcomes scholars from other religious traditions. The Institute accepts applications from abroad as well as the United States. People of color are encouraged to apply.

Application deadline:

January 15, 2014

For details visit:

NEW SERIES!

RELIGION AND ITS OTHERS: STUDIES IN RELIGION, NONRELIGION AND SECULARITY

SERIES EDITORS

Dr. Stacey Gutkowski, Kings College London

Dr. Lois Lee, University College London

Dr. Johannes Quack, Goethe-Universität, Frankfurt

The new series Religion and Its Others: Studies in Religion, Nonreligion and Secularity (RIO) is the first to consider the multiple relations between religion, nonreligion, and secularity. Monographs, edited volumes, and readers in this series are concerned with the forming and reforming of religious traditions in relation to their cultural and political contexts, their boundaries, and what is beyond those boundaries. The series explores apparently nonreligious or 'irreligious' phenomena that are significantly related to religion (including forms of atheism, agnosticism, indifference) and modes of differentiation between religion and its various others, often institutionalized in cultural, legal, and political orders. Affiliated with the interdisciplinary Nonreligion and Secularity Research Network (<http://nsrn.net>), the series invites proposals from across disciplines, including religious studies; anthropology, sociology, and psychology of religions; history and philosophy of religions; political, cultural, and area studies; media and communication studies; and studies of visual and performing arts.

Research areas of interest include:

- ▶ the various modes of differentiation between religion and its others;
- ▶ the various kinds of nonreligion and nonreligious-religious interrelations – the critical, pejorative, and radically secularist as well as the curious, admiring, or covetous and the distant, ignorant, or indifferent;
- ▶ civic, juridical, and political as well as aesthetic, material, emotional, practical, or spatial manifestations of these relations.

We welcome proposals and ideas for the new series. Please contact Dr. Alissa Jones Nelson, Acquisitions Editor for Religious Studies, in the first instance: Alissa.JonesNelson@degruyter.com

RELIGIOUS RESEARCH ASSOCIATION

CALL FOR PAPERS

2014 Annual Meeting
October 31-November 2, 2013
JW Marriott, Indianapolis, Indiana

Revisiting Gender and Religion

Gender is a fundamental element of religious life. Understanding the relationship of gender to religion has been of sustained interest to scholars and practitioners alike, though the level of attention has varied. During the 1970s, scholarship on religion and gender began to expand dramatically, transforming questions, challenges, and directions for future research. Changes in our global world in the intervening years—in the social dynamics of gender, in the nature of religious leadership, participation, practice, politics, and social action—are due for renewed and continued scholarly attention, lending urgency to this opportunity to revisit gender and religion.

Presentations are welcome at this meeting on all topics related to the social dimensions of religion, particularly organized religion as that reflects the traditional focus of the RRA. Topics related to gender and religion might include, among others:

- theories and concepts of gender in relation to theories of religion
- gender and religion in international and/or comparative contexts
- implications of gender embedded in the rise of nationalisms
- intersections of gender, religion, and politics
- changes in the presence of women and men in leadership of religious organizations
- dynamics of gender within religious organizations
- gendering of religious communities, such as “Cowboy Churches”
- women as majority participants in religious organizations and movements
- faiths and feminisms
- religious socialization and gender identities
- intersections of gender, sexuality, and sexual orientation
- religious organizations and LGBTQ issues and identities
- gender in faith-based service, relief efforts, development
- religion and harm: durable inequalities, violence, sexual misconduct, and other “dark sides” of religion and gender

Submit all session and paper proposals through the online portal found at the following link, choosing the RRA option on the submission form: www.sssrweb.org.

Submissions of sessions and individual paper proposals opens: February 3, 2014

Submissions close: March 31, 2014

Society for the Scientific Study of Religion

CALL FOR PAPERS

2014 Annual Meeting
October 31-November 2, 2014
JW Marriott, Indianapolis, Indiana

Building Bridges

SSSR's current web site notes:

The Society for the Scientific Study of Religion was founded in 1949 by scholars in religion and social science. Its purpose is to stimulate and communicate significant scientific research on religious institutions and religious experience. Scholars from all fields of study who are interested in the scientific exploration of religion are invited to join the Society. Membership in the Society for the Scientific Study of Religion gives scholars the opportunity to share their research and ideas with other scholars.

Our theme for the 2014 conference is "Building Bridges" between all those interested in the study of religion. This includes any disciplines that focus upon the study of religion as well as scholars from the widest possible geographical and cultural areas. Our intent is to build bridges between disciplines and cultures that have become isolated and communicate only among themselves and not to others with similar interests but from different perspectives. Suggestions for contributions include:

- the study of religion in diverse cultures and regions (Eastern, Central Europe, Asia, South America, etc.)
- the study of religion within diverse faith traditions (Islam, Christianity, Paganism, NRMs, etc.)
- inter-disciplinary studies of religion (religious studies & the social and behavioral sciences, etc.)
- new disciplines that study religion (cognitive science, evolutionary psychology, etc.)
- methodology interaction in the study of religion (quantitative, qualitative, creative, etc.)
- the study of non-belief and atheism

All session and paper proposals must be submitted via the on-line submission system that will be available on the SSSR's web site, <http://www.sssrweb.org>. In addition to the session proposer's full contact information, a session proposal requires a session title and an abstract of not more than 150 words describing the goal of the session and how the proposer expects the session to contribute to scientific knowledge about religion. Individual paper proposals require the name(s) of the author(s), first author's full contact information, an abstract of not more than 150 words that succinctly describes the question(s) motivating the research, the data and methods used, and what the paper contributes or expects to contribute to the knowledge or understanding of religion.

Submissions Open: February 03, 2014 (see <http://www.sssrweb.org>)

Submissions Close: March 31, 2014

Decision Notification: April 30, 2014

Please direct questions to: Ralph Hood (UTC), Program Chair (Ralph-Hood@utc.edu)
Co-chair for Asia-Pacific region: Alpha Possamai-Inesedy (Alpha.Possamai@uws.edu.au)
Co-Chair for Western, Central, and Eastern Europe: Elisabeth Arweck (Elisabeth.arweck@warwick.ac.uk)
Special assistant for developing sessions on Islam: Besheer Mohamed (BMohamed@PewResearch.org)
Graduate Student Representative: Christopher F. Silver (Christopher-Silver@utc.edu)

Thank you to...

...Oxford University Press for once again sponsoring the New Book Reception.

...Brill, DeGruyter, and Lexington Books for sponsoring author's tables at the New Book Reception.

...Tricia Bruce for serving as SSSR Program Chair. Tricia took in all meeting proposals, created the SSSR sessions, and then worked with the RRA program chair to merge all sessions into a seamless program.

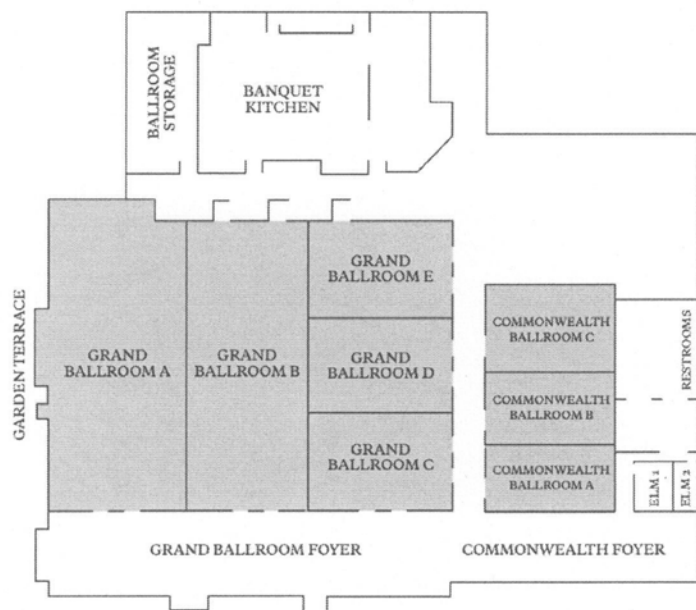

...Perry Chang for serving as RRA Program Chair. Perry did the same job with the RRA sessions and then worked with Tricia to create the final product.

...Becky Vasko from the Center for the Study of Religion and American Culture at IUPUI, who once again formatted the program you are holding and arranged for it to be printed. She also helps Joy at the meeting registration desk.

...Joy Sherrill who, although now retired from IUPUI, continued to do the administrative work of SSSR, processing all memberships and meeting registrations. Joy is also running the registration desk at the meeting for the 7th consecutive time.

...Art Farnsley for his 7th year of service as SSSR Executive Officer. Art coordinated all hotel arrangements, member communications, and countless miscellaneous tasks essential to a successful meeting.
